The Gift That Last's A Lifetime
Your Baby's Name

A name is the first, the most personal, and possibly the most important gift that parents can offer. Unlike most other gifts, it is meant to last a lifetime.

Keeping this in mind is important because it means that the name has to wear well. It goes beyond the period of infancy, when the name is simply a sound to your new baby beyond childhood, when the name may sometimes be a source of pride or of embarrassment beyond adolesence and early adult life into maturity and old age. The name you give serves to establish an identity throughout a lifetime of major events and changes.

Choose the gift carefully - not only to commemorate the past but to celebrate the future.

The chapters that follow are intended to help you make your selection. Taken together, they do not comprise a book of rules to be rigidly followed-simply a guide based in large measure on the experience of other parents, today and in the past, who had to arrived the same decision. In the end, though, the responsibility for judgment belongs to you. Here and there, I will try to remind you that it's joyful responsibility as well.

The Gift That Last's A Lifetime
"Your Baby's Name"

A name is the first, the most personal, and possibly the most important gift that parents can offer. Unlike most other gifts, it is meant to last a lifetime. The name you give serves to establish an identity throughout a lifetime of major events and changes. Choose the gift carefully—not only to commemorate the past but to celebrate the future.
